

To whom it concern,

Phumelela is an outgoing and polite young lady. She had many interests at school such as volleyball and her peers acknowledged her leadership by voting her as 1st team Captain. For her grade 11 job shadowing she worked at a nursery school. She loved the interaction with the children and it was evident in her presentation to her fellow classmates. I believe this experience made her realise her love for teaching and helping young children.

She is bubbly and determined. I had the honor of teaching her mathematics. As we are all aware it is not the easiest subject. This did not discourage Phumelela, she remained focused to ensure that she got the best possible mark. I was impressed by how if she did not do well in a test, she would tackle the problem immediately by analyzing where she went wrong and discussing with me how to correct issue. This approach indicates the maturity which she has.

Phumelela has the type of personality that makes all feel welcomed around her. I can imagine as a teacher she would be entertaining and loved by her students. I am very happy to hear that she is trying to pursue this career as she has great potential to succeed.
